Scandal in High Life. The social sensation in Philadelphia is il for divorce just instituted in the courts of Knox county, Maine, by William Howard Gardiner formerly a rich Bostonian, but now a Philledel phian. The defendant, Mrs. Gardiner, is a daughter of Henry Carey Baird, the publisher, bimself a descendent of the famous political communication Henry Carey. Both principals are well known. Fourteen years ago Mr. Gardiner met Miss Baird at one of the Eastern watering places. So the were rich, and when, after rejecting a score of handsome suitors, Miss Baird decided to accept Mr. Gardiner's hand, society gave quick approval to the choice and predicted a happy sequel to the marriage. The wedding in June, 1874, was one of the most brilliant of that sesson, and was attended by many distinguished guest. After a trip abroad the couple began housekeeping in Philadelphia, but removed subsequently to Boston. In 1878 they rented a channing villa in Boulogne, and sailed for France in order to educate their children abroad. The society of that city was too much for Mr. Gardiner, and he soon became one of the liveliest members of the American Colony. Trouble fellowed between his wife and himself, and she finally left him and went to a convent. When the case was subsequently heard in Fr. 100, Mr. Gardiner, in the presence of the court officials, asked his wife's forgiveness. He was ordered to pay her enough money to return to this country, but while the case was subsequently to the Henry Carey. Both principals are well known to this country, but while the case was pending his sister departed with the children. Mrs. Gardiner will enter suit for divorce herself on the ground of infidelity, and ask the custody of her favorite child. One basis on which the husband asks for a separation is cruelty.
